THE CONVENING OF THE FORUM

2019 Global Economic Forum

In the last 30 years, humanity has developed stronger methods of communication, travel, and connectivity. Humans today are more connected than at any other point in history and are capable of traveling the world, both physically and digitally, in new and exciting ways. However, technological innovations have also threatened the place of the worker in today's society, as many sectors of the global economy shift to automated or robotic labor. For policymakers, business leaders, and workers themselves, these innovations create considerable uncertainty for the future of work, alongside the possibility of potential benefits.

The 2019 Global Economic Forum will explore the issues of globalization, automation, and the shifting landscape of the global economy. Working in country delegation teams, students will simulate a modified G20 conference with representatives from the world's top 20 advanced economies, as well as representatives from crucial emerging economies. Collectively, the G20 represents all inhabited continents, 85% of global economic output, two-thirds of the world's population and 75% of international trade. Students will work to create solutions to the future of work issue and will debate the topic from the lens of government, business, and social interests. Each team has been assigned to advocate on behalf of an assigned country from the perspective of an assigned working group committee (Agriculture, Automation and Manufacturing, Intellectual Property and Cyber Security, or Social Development).

The World Affairs Council gratefully acknowledges The Fox School of Business at Temple University and Temple CIBER (Center for International Business Education and Research) for their generous sponsorship of the 2019 Global Economic Forum and for their enduring support of the Council's education mission.

2019 SUMMER GLOBAL LEADERSHIP SEMINAR

The Rise of Political Populism

July 8-12, 2019

The 2019 Summer Global Leadership Seminar, scheduled for July 8-12, 2019 at the World Affairs Council of Philadelphia in Center City, will be a week-long summer institute open to all rising high school sophomores, juniors and seniors. Through guest lectures and interactive workshops, students will explore the rise of political populism both at home and abroad. Students will explore the cultural, economic, and political roots of populism and will compare and contrast these conditions with the current populist movements in both America and abroad. Additionally, students will take part in a debate and a half-day crisis simulation during which they will role-play the decision-making processes of political leaders. During the fifth-day, participants embark on a field trip to Washington, D.C., which offers students the exciting opportunity to meet with and hear directly from various leaders at the center of these issues. Detailed information about the 2019 Summer Global Leadership Seminar will be available in Spring 2019 at our website wacphila.org/education. Limited spots available for high school students!
